Old New York State Newspapers—Locating Tool

February 5, 2013

When history buffs and genealogists come to your library looking for the microfilm for area newspapers from the 1800s, or 2007--and anything in between, there is a tool to help you find out where the newspapers are located. The New York State Newspaper Project identifies and locates papers from throughout the state. Although the twenty-plus year project wound down in 2007, it leaves behind two very useful databases—one for the New York State Library's holdings and one for holdings in local community libraries and historical societies.

The database includes microfilm AND print newspaper holdings...

Films of NY papers at the State Library are available for interlibrary loan!!!

Interlibrary Loan

Newspapers

The New York State Library provides interlibrary loan (ILL) service to New York State government and makes its research resources available to other libraries through interlibrary loan. The New York State Library accepts interlibrary loan requests only from libraries.

Newspapers

Newspapers on film (except for The New York Times) may be borrowed through interlibrary loan, with a limit of five reels per title per request. Newspapers in paper format may be used at the State Library if condition permits. Many newspapers in paper format are stored in another building. Users must request them one work-day in advance of use.

General Public

Within New York State

All New York State citizens have access to the resources of the State Library through their local library or library system. Most books are loaned at no charge for 12 weeks. Within copyright restrictions, photocopies of noncirculating material will be supplied to libraries within New York State at no charge.

Outside New York State

The New York State Library only accepts interlibrary loan requests from libraries. Books and microforms are lent, when
