Remember, when looking at a 'Periodical Record', the date in the bibliographic record at the top will often be different from the date indicated for the specific items that each library is supposed to indicate with the call number, when attaching their record to the database. The date may reflect the year of first publication.

A periodical does not have to be a magazine. Any print work that is produced serially is in this category, including some of the study guides for tests...

The screenshot shows a search result for 'Literary market place (New York, N.Y.: 1988)'. The call number 'R 070.5 Lit v. 2012' is circled in red. A callout box with a blue border contains the text: 'Notice the publication year is open-ended. Specific 'item' dates are with the call #.' Red arrows point from this text to the '1988-' in the publisher information and the '2012' in the call number.
