

Tuesday's Tip

information provided by Adriance Memorial Library to make your life a little bit easier

NASA.GOV

March 21, 2017

If you read the book, "Hidden Figures" by Margot Lee Shetterly or if you watched the movie, "Hidden Figures" based on the book, you may want to know more information about a history of rockets, Project Mercury, Langley Research Center, hidden figures (Mary Jackson, Katherine Johnson and Dorothy Vaughan), etc. You can find all information at NASA.GOV

NASA.gov, the official web site of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, features an extensive collection of information related to the nation's civilian space program, the aeronautics and aerospace research, and the cosmos. The site can be accessed by resource category or by a search engine on each page.

The site is developed for a very broad audience (for media, for educators and for students).

For NASA.gov, there are a lot to choose from, but it's very organized. It is a good resource for all ages.
