In observance of Presidents’ Day this February take an electronic tour of the presidential libraries from the National archives.

Visit https://www.archives.gov/presidential-libraries

You can explore any of the 14 presidential libraries, do research and discover visiting information.

Presidential Libraries hold the raw materials of history: evidence of democracy at work and of the continuing relevance of the Presidents’ past decisions.

At the dedication of his library on June 30, 1941, Franklin Roosevelt observed:

“\(\text{To bring together the records of the past and to house them in buildings where they will be preserved for the use of men and women in the future, a Nation must believe in three things. It must believe in the past. It must believe in the future. It must, above all, believe in the capacity of its own people so to learn from the past that they can gain in judgement in creating their own future.}\)"
